The moral discourses; translated by Elizabeth Carter
Of natural affection. WHEN he was visited by one of the magistrates, Epictetusinquired of him about several particulars, and asked if hehad children and a wife. The man replied that he had;and Epictetus inquired further, how he felt under thecircumstances. Miserable, the man said. Then Epictetusasked, In what respect, for men do not marry and begetchildren in order to be wretched, but rather to be happy.

Epictetus, Discourses, book 1, Of natural affection.
Epictetus (55□135 C.E.) Epictetus (pronounced Epic-TEE-tus) was an exponent of Stoicism who flourished in the early second century C.E. about four hundred years after the Stoic school of Zeno of Citium was established in Athens. He lived and worked, first as a student in Rome, and then as a teacher with his own school in Nicopolis in Greece.
