Bird - Crystal Chan

"Bird" is a beautiful book that looks hard things right in the eye and demands explanations. Everyone in "Bird" is wrapped up in themselves and the sadness and anxieties of much of life. Jewel has tried all her life to make up for her sad parents' and silent Grandfather's loss on the day she was born of five-year-old John, nicknamed Bird, who ...

Chan has a fluid, wise, poetic prose style and a large heart that leaves everything on the page. As someone who is biracial, I wish I had had this book growing up. The narrator, Jewel, is of Jamaican and Mexican descent, and Chan manages to weave in culture, geology, astronomy, and the supernatural all in one touching tale of loss and healing.
